Hostages To Be Executed If Hitler Or Leaders Are Put To Death

LONDON, Oct. 7.—A London Daily Mail dispatch from Stockholm reported today that the Germans are openly threatening to hold Leopold III, king of the Belgians, and his children, King Christian X of Denmark, Polish Lieut. Gen. Tadeusz Komorowski (General Bor) and other important persons in their hands as hostages to stave off execution of Nazi war criminals by the Allies.

Field Marshal Hermann Goering's National Zeitung has given first hint of the plot, the Stockholm story declared, saying that "among well known persons now prisoners in Germany, the most outstanding will be selected as hostages."

The Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Morgan Tidningen, according to the Daily Mail, reports that General Bor and members of his staff, including several Polish generals, all of whom took part in the Warsaw uprising, are destined to become leading pawns in Nazi machinations to get around the Allied war criminal clauses.

Bor, Leopold and Christian, the correspondent declared, are calculated to be worth Hitler, Goering and Goebbels in exchange value. Himmler intends to hold all hostages until the last moment, the Berlin dispatch said and if any German leader falling into Allied hands is sentenced to death, one hostage automatically will pay the same price.

Another Daily Mail dispatch from Stockholm reported that more than 1,500 Nazis and collaborators from Germany, Norway, Denmark and Finland have taken refuge in Sweden. Most of them arrived after the Allied breakthrough in France. Between 300 and 400 came from Norway, another 200 or 300 from Denmark and hundreds from Germany. Still others are expected.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 7.—The reunited Cary Grants were enjoying their second honeymoon in San Francisco today after a separation, termed a "friendly" one, and "a misunderstanding," had lasted six weeks. Mrs. Grant, heiress to the Woolworth department store millions, came to the Bay City several days ago, registering at a swank Nob Hill hotel. Grant came on from Hollywood to see her and asked for a dinner date.

Jap Shipping Losses Mount Steadily In Allied Aerial Sweeps

GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, Oct. 7.—Jap shipping losses in Southwest Pacific waters mounted steadily today as a result of widespread Allied aerial sweeps in which three Nipponese vessels were sunk, a fourth probably sent to the bottom and at least 15 smaller craft were wrecked or damaged.

Shipping targets of the airmen, a communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur said, included two 3,300-ton vessels and a minelayer. Mitchell bombers and fighter planes also struck the Galea and Kaseo airdromes on Halmahera on successive days, rendering the fields unserviceable. Other Mitchells and attack planes hit Ambona to the south, blasting airfield installations and destroyed a 1,000-ton ship off Laha. Night patrol bombers, operating in the same area, struck the Laha waterfront and blew up a 3,000-ton vessel.

A low-level attack on Menado in the Celebes by medium bombers resulted in fires at the Sidate airfield, among warehouses and waterfront equipment. Four jugs in the harbor were sunk or damaged.

Patrol bombers, flying west of Menado, sank the minelayer, assailed the Kangan airfield and hit Gorontalo township. Going on to nearby Kendari in Masiri strait, the patrols probably sank a 3,000-ton freighter-transport.

Japanese airdromes on Ceram and Boeroe were struck anew by patrol planes, which made sweeps over the island coasts and adjacent isles, destroying or damaging 11 barges and numerous small craft.

As the result of mopping up operations in various sections of New Guinea, MacArthur's statement said, 595 additional Japanese were killed, 153 more were taken prisoner and 204 friendly nationals were liberated up to last Thursday. The fighting took place on Biak island, on Bougainville and at Vogelkop, also among the Aitape, Noemfoor, Morotti and Samri sectors.

JAPANESE TAKE LAST PORT ON EASTERN COAST

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—Capture of the Chinese east coast port of Foochow, capital of Fukien province, was claimed today by the Japanese.

The fall of Foochow, across the narrow Formosa strait from the northern tip of the Jap-occupied island of Formosa, was announced by the Tokyo radio in a broadcast recorded by the FCC.

Foochow was the last remaining East China coast port held by the Chinese.

The capture of the port city had been anticipated after a strong Jap invasion force was landed on the China coast 25 miles north of Foochow September 27.

The Japs asserted that the invasion was a counter-measure to thwart the possible landing of United States forces in the area.

Foochow first was occupied in April of 1939. In September of that year the Chinese retook the city.

An official communique of the Jap imperial high command which said Foochow had been occupied three days ago.

SEVEN CONVICTS SAW WAY OUT OF MICHIGAN PEN

JACKSON, Mich., Oct. 7.—Seven convicts who escaped from Jackson prison by sawing their way through two sets of bars last night were the object of a state-wide search today, centering in the area between Jackson and Detroit.

Four of the seven convicts are under life imprisonment sentences. Three of the fugitives were known to have relatives or friends in Detroit and were believed to be heading toward Detroit.

County and state police road patrols were put on the alert and a Detroit police dragnet thrown out.

BRITISH SEEK CONTINUATION OF LEND LEASE

English Seek To Keep Step With American Business In Reconversion

London Asks Munitions And Supplies For Jap War To Free Own Industry

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—A plan to enable Great Britain to keep step with the United States in reconversion to peace-time industry, officials disclosed today, has been brought to Washington by Lord Keynes, economic adviser to the British treasury.

The plan is based on the continuation of lend-lease aid to Britain after the collapse of Germany until the end of the war with Japan. As explained in British circles, the London government desires that Britain be supplied through lend-lease with the munitions and other war materials for her part in the war with Japan, so that a part of British industry can return to production of civilian goods.

Otherwise, it was pointed out, reconversion in the United States would give American industry a head start over British industry in postwar competition.

As one British source expressed it: "The plan is intended to let us get on a reasonable level footing with the United States."

Agreement Reported

Such an agreement in principle is reported to have been reached between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill at Quebec. The mission of Lord Keynes is charged with working out the plan in Washington.

After that step has been taken, a large British commission is expected to come to the United States, to discuss final details with an American group consisting of representatives of the state, war, and commerce departments.

Following the Quebec conference, President Roosevelt made it clear that lend-lease would be extended to Great Britain after the end of the European war. In a letter to Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley, he said: "Until the complete defeat of both Japan and Germany, the flow of lend-lease aid should be continued in the amounts necessary to enable the combined strength of all the United Nations to defeat our common enemies as quickly as possible and with the least loss of life."

GANG OF BOYS UPSETS PREMIER OF FDR FILM

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—A barrage of fire crackers thrown by a gang of boys was held responsible by police today for the disturbance which upset the world premier of the anti-Dewey musical show "F. D. R. Victory Bandwagon," in Symphony Hall last night.

The Fourth of July fireworks were set off in the rear of the hall just after Earl Browder, Communist leader had completed a campaign speech urging re-election of President Roosevelt.

About 300 persons in the rear of the hall rushed to the street, but police quickly calmed the crowd.

Browder, who spoke between acts, made no reference to Mr. Roosevelt's statement of Thursday night repudiating "communist and fascist" support of his candidacy.

He assailed both Gov. Thomas E. Dewey and his running mate, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, but directed most of his talk to denouncing John L. Lewis.

Members of the Massachusetts Women's Political Club picketed the hall with placards reading "Communists can't tell Americans how to vote," after an unsuccessful attempt to have the show banned on the grounds that it "insultingly" satirized Dewey.

Dewey Prepared To Challenge Roosevelt On Red Repudiation

ABOARD DEWEY CAMPAIGN TRAIN, ENROUTE TO CHARLESTON, W. VA., Oct. 7.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey entered the border state of West Virginia today for a campaign speech challenging President Roosevelt's "repudiation" of communist backing and attacking the "whole course" of the Roosevelt administration.

The Republican presidential nominee, whose Charleston speech tonight will be broadcast nationally between 8:45 and 9:15 p. m. (EWT) will take issue with the competence of the New Deal to convert to peacetime jobs.

Members of Dewey's staff said the Charleston talk, which was completed after President Roosevelt spoke Thursday night, is of the same slashing type as the one he delivered Sept. 25 in Oklahoma City.

The GOP candidate is expected to "call the roll" of the left wing backers among the Roosevelt-Truman supporters in his answer to the President's assertion that "I have never sought, and I do not welcome the support of any person or group committed to communism, or fascism, or any other foreign ideology which would undermine the American system of government."

Gov. Dewey made no mystery of what he will talk about tonight. Referring to President Roosevelt's (Continued on Page Two)

POLYGAMY CULT MAPS APPEAL OF 31 CONVICTIONS

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 7.—Defense attorneys prepared today to appeal the conviction of 31 fundamentalist cult members to the Utah state supreme court. The defendants were found guilty of conspiracy to preach and practice polygamy last night by an eight-man jury at Salt Lake City. The jury returned the verdict after only two hours' deliberation.

The defendants accepted the decision without any show of emotion. District Judge M. J. Bronson announced sentences would be imposed next Friday. Maximum sentence is one year in the county jail or a fine of $1,000.

The verdict was returned 54 years to the day after plural marriages were banned by a Mormon manifesto. It marked the third conviction of various cult members in trials conducted by state and federal governments with the cooperation of the Mormon church.

Defense Attorney Knox Patterson said the basis of their appeal would be the contention that preaching of any religious doctrine does not constitute conspiracy.

An appeal by another group of cultists, recently convicted of unlawful cohabitation, now is pending. Also resting in circuit court is an appeal from a conviction on charges of violation of the Mann act by still another group of cultists.

SERTORIUS SEES THREAT OF NEW ALLIED THRUST

LONDON, Oct. 7.—Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, German military commentator, asserted today that three weeks ago Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had some 12 well-trained Allied divisions in reserve in Britain and that it is not unlikely they may be used for a new major landing along the coast on the southeastern part of the North sea.

Sertorius said also that a compact new force might be thrown into the western front at an appropriate moment.

Nation Pays Tribute To Al Smith

Quarter Of A Million View Happy Warrior's Body At Cathedral

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—Alfred E. Smith today received formal tribute from his nation and his church as the Catholic funeral service was solemnly carried out at St. Patrick's cathedral where his body lay in state.

From 2 p. m. yesterday afternoon, all night long into the early hours of this morning, an endless stream of mourners walking three to six abreast filed past the coffin of the man who was four times governor of New York and presidential candidate in 1928.

Rich and poor, citizens of all faiths and political opinion paid their respects to their beloved Al Smith, born humbly on New York's lower East side, risen to a national figure, the "Happy Warrior" who wore a brown derby.

They came at the rate of 15,000 an hour until an estimated quarter of a million persons had said goodbye to Al Smith with a word or a prayer.

In death, his church exalted the former governor with the honor, unprecedented for a layman, of having his body lie in state overnight in the cathedral.

An honor guard from the 69th regiment and the Catholic war veterans' band, the bronze eulogist where he lay with the medal of the Knights of Malta on his chest and his hands holding a papal-blessed rosary.

Today the doors of the cathedral opened to receive crowds for the funeral service. About half the available space was open to the general public. The Rt. Rev. Joseph P. Donahue, vicar general of the New York archdiocese, preached the sermon at the funeral mass.

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, after visiting the Smith home, went to the cathedral with Mrs. Dewey last night and stood silently for a few moments beside the open coffin.

Governor Dewey issued a proclamation designating today as a day of public mourning for the former state leader. He ordered the closing of all state offices and directing that their flags should fly at half mast for the next 30 days.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was to attend the Smith funeral this morning and Maj. Gen. Thomas A. Terry of the Second Service Command was to serve as the President's personal representative.

SOLDIER, SAILOR SOUGHT IN DEATH OF GIRL CLERK

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—Two servicemen—a soldier and a sailor—were sought today in the slaying of an 18-year-old government girl whose raped and garrotted body was found Friday on a wind-swept golf course near the Potomac river.

The pretty war-department clerk who was identified as Dorothy Berrum, of Chippewa Falls, Wis., was strangled with her own blue and white knitted snood.

From friends and intimates of the girl, police learned of a soldier known as "Al" whom she is said to have met at a USO dance. Other friends told of her fondness for a sailor known as "Jerry."

It was said that neither had been seen since the girl first disappeared and a widespread search of surrounding camps was started.

Information gathered from questioning the girl's friends and clues found at the scene of the crime led authorities to center their investigation around the "military angle." Among the clues was a belt of the variety issued to servicemen. Because of this, a group of army men joined in the case.

Mrs. R. S. Berrum of Chippewa, Wis., said her daughter graduated from McDonnell high school, a parochial school of that city, last Spring and came to Washington in June to go to work for the war department. She described Dorothy as short of stature, only about four and a half feet tall, and weighing 85 or 90 pounds.

The 1940 Republican presidential candidate was stricken by a streptococcus throat infection three days ago and has been treated with penicillin since Thursday when his temperature soared to 104. Last night Dr. Salzer said his patient was doing well and nothing new could be expected for 24 hours.

GIANT PINCERS CLOSING IN ON COLOGNE, RHINE

U. S. Seventh Fights Way Closer Toward Vital Belfort Gap

THIRD BATTERS DRIANT

Presence Of Marshall In Paris May Be Signal For Great Drive

By International News Service. Two-armed columns of U. S. First Army infantry were moving stubbornly forward in Germany today in a giant pincers movement against Cologne and the Rhineland. Far to the south on the roaring 450-mile western front, the U. S. Seventh fought its way relentlessly toward the vital Belfort Gap opening on the southern defenses of the westwall.

Between these two sectors the American Third Army, battering against the powerful defense of ancient Fort Driant on the road to Metz, were reported to have reached the center of the stronghold.

To the north, the British Second Army smashed east and north in Holland and one front line dispatch said they were within 2,000 yards of the important stronghold of Tilburg 11 miles northwest of Eindhoven.

Canadians Advance

The Canadian First Army jabbed across the Leopold canal in the face of heavy Nazi mortar and gains at the western end of the curving front.

The presence of Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the American Army, in Paris for a conference with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower gave rise to renewed speculation that the present activity along the western front is a preliminary to a giant offensive movement against the lines of the Reich defenders in all areas.

The two drives of Lieut. Courtney H. Hodges' First Army against Cologne were under way in the sector north and south of isolated Aachen.

North of Aachen the Yanks beat down frantic Nazi opposition for gains in the Ubach area which swept them to within a half mile of Beggenhof while another column moving along the highway toward the southeast advanced for a mile and a half under heavy fire.

Nearing Duren

Deepest penetration of the Reich was made south of Aachen where the Yank forces were last reported within six miles of Duren which is half way between the Reich frontier and Cologne.

The German DNB agency broadcast from Berlin that the British in Holland had assembled some 16 divisions in Holland for new thrusts which were in the offing.

At the northern end of their corridor in Holland the British engaged the Germans in bitter fighting between the Waal and Lek rivers and one German report said that Allied armored forces had reached Arnhem.

The Third Army of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton also made important gains east of Lunenburg where they moved half way through the forest of Parroy despite heavy resistance. In the southeastern part of the forest, a strong Nazi counter-attack was absorbed and the advance continued.

armored forces, along with Soviet and Romanian infantry, surged through Hungary in a drive aimed at Budapest and the removal of Hitler's last Balkan ally from the war.
The drive toward the Hungarian capital was in progress where the Soviets crossed the western boundary of Romania into Hungary.
One Allied report placed two Russian columns in Hungary only 40 miles apart and added that Budapest was now only 100 miles away from Soviet spearheads. Szeged, the second city of Hungary, was only 14 miles from the vanguard of Red Army troops.
Belgrade, the capital of Yugoslavia, was reported to be under fire from the artillery of the combined Russian and Yugoslav partisan artillery where the imminent cutting of the railroad will sever the last feasible escape route for the Nazis remaining in the Balkan peninsula.
Farther south the Russians reached within 35 miles of the rail center of Nish.

New Russ Drive
Moscow's communique made no mention of the fighting in the central portion of eastern front, but a German report said Soviet armies had opened a new offensive against East Prussia in a twin drive from the east and south.
In the Baltic states the Red armies made a landing on the huge island of Osel where their beachhead was reported to have been firmly established along a 25-mile front with penetrations of up to 12 and a half miles.
Osel is one of three islands dominating the entrance to the Gulf of Riga and the other two already are in Soviet hands. The reduction of Osel will close the sea route of escape for the Nazis fighting in the restricted area around Riga, capital of Latvia.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in New Guinea announced new air sweeps against Japanese shipping in which three vessels were sunk, a fourth damaged and probably sunk and 15 smaller craft damaged or destroyed.

Dewey Prepared To Challenge Roosevelt
On Red Repudiation

Thursday broadcast, the governor said:
"Mr. Roosevelt asked the American people not to look now because somebody is following me. Since he would like softly to deny the means by which he seeks election to 16 straight years in the White House, I shall be compelled to discuss it quite openly in Charleston on the radio."
One of Dewey's assistants said deal with "the whole course of the administration and its competence to convert the peacetime jobs."
The latter phase of the Charleston talk is calculated to attract the support of the mine workers, not only in West Virginia but in Pennsylvania.
The Republican nominee laid the groundwork for his attack on the alleged Democratic-Communist alliance during his recent transcontinental tour when he charged that Earl Browder, head of the Communist party and an avowed supporter of the Roosevelt-Truman ticket, was pardoned by the President "so he could help with this campaign."
Tonight's speech is expected to deal at length with the activities of Sidney Hillman, head of the CIO Political Action Committee.
Members of Dewey's staff insist their man has President Roosevelt on the defensive and that the latter, in his only two campaign speeches so far, has been forced to answer charges flung at him and his administration by the GOP nominee.
Before boarding his eight-car train at New York City last night, Dewey visited St. Patrick's cathedral to pay his final respects to the late Gov. Alfred E. Smith, for whom he had a warm regard and deep admiration.
It was a dramatic scene as the 42-year-old Republican aspirant to the White House stood by the side of the "Happy Warrior", who, 16 years ago, was the Democratic presidential nominee.
Dewey paved the way for tonight's discussion of postwar reconversion by announcing in Albany yesterday the appointment of a committee of experts to supply small business in New York state with all the information possible about new processes, materials and products developed under the spur of wartime necessity.
This knowledge, he said, is of vital importance to business if jobs are to be produced after the war.
"What little thinking our national administration has done on the subject of postwar business reconversion," he declared, "has expressed itself chiefly in attempts to evolve a completely regulated adjustment. This deplorable preoccupation indicates our government's conviction that there is little enterprise left in our nation's business."

DUTCH WALL--BEFORE AND AFTER

THE NORTH SEA is rushing over the Dutch island of Walcheren today inundating German guns and fixed positions established on the small island. The large sea wall, shown in top airview, erected to hold out the water from the center of the island which is below sea level, was crushed when more than 2,000 Allied planes dropped 12,000 pound "earthquake" bombs for a series of direct hits, as shown in the bottom Signal Corps radiophoto. BROUGHT THE LOGS--AND WERE BURNED THEREON

GERMAN ATROCITY: These are burned Russians. Or what remains of them. They are stacked up between logs in a funeral pyre. The victims brought their own logs. Machine-gunned by the Nazis, they then were thrown upon them and set afire. The picture, says Moscow, which released it together with the story of the horrible massacre, was taken in the Kluga settlement. (International Soundphoto)

THIS UNUSUAL PHOTO shows the bombing of a Jap "Sally" plane by parafrag bombs dropped in a Fifth Air Force low level attack on old Namlea airdrome at Boeroe island in the Pacific. This Jap plane, generously camouflaged, went up in smoke just a few seconds after this picture was taken. JAPS IN CHINA

THINGS are not going so well in China. The Japanese have been making progress against Foochow, the last important seaport held by the Chinese. Other strategic places are seriously threatened. American airmen have been forced to destroy all but one of their forward bases in eastern China, because of the Japanese raids.

It is, of course, very hard to provide effective help in China at a time when American resources of men, ships and material are necessarily concentrated farther south, in areas more immediately threatened. But the Chinese have always been friends of America, and their friendship may count more effectively in the future if more help for them can be provided now. It is very unfortunate that the Japanese are gaining such strong footholds.

THE RULER'S DUTY

AMERICAN citizens are rulers of their own country. In their own hands lies the fate of their nation. And, as British friends might put it, they jolly well better appreciate their rights and privileges!

If the citizen is the ruler, what, then, is the President of the United States? He is their servant. Not the servant of the individual, but of the public. He is elected to carry out their wishes.

There is just one way to get the wishes carried out—and that is by voting on election day. If citizens want the way of life one candidate proposes to give them, it is their blessed right and their bounden duty to vote for that man. If they prefer the way of life the other offers, it is equally their right and duty to vote for him.

The preference of the voting citizen becomes the command of the nation. Let the citizen think well which is better for the nation, and then let him VOTE.

For a citizen to stay from the polls is for a ruler to run away from his throne, for an executive to run off on his factory, for a worker to run away from his job. It is cowardice, laziness and irresponsibility.

Let every citizen make sure he is properly registered, eligible for the performance of his duty and exercise of his power. Then let him VOTE.

BIGGEST NAVY

AMERICANS like to think of the United States as the biggest and best in everything. In one field very important nowadays that is deniably true. Secretary of the Navy Forrestal announces that our navy is bigger than all the fleets in the world together were five years ago. It is twice as big as its nearest competitor, the British navy. Since the war began, it has increased 300 per cent, and the program is little more than half finished.

How discouraging this must be to our enemies!

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

STETTINIUS PUTS BLAME ON JONES

BATON ROUGE, La.—Down here where Standard Oil is now doing such an excellent job of producing synthetic rubber—after getting a belated start from the government—a lot of people wonder why Governor Dewey is jumping on Miss Perkins instead of aiming his shots at, obviously, the weakest point in the Democratic preparedness armor.

Some of the Democratic politicians up in Washington privately are wondering the same thing. Confidentially, they are delighted. For punching Miss Perkins is considered rather an outworn pastime. Westbrook Pegler has been doing it so long it has got monotonous.

That is why Democratic leaders have been surprised and pleased that Dewey has not jumped on the record of President Roosevelt's Secretary of Commerce in regard to rubber.

Certainly Mr. Dewey and his large staff of researchers have available the public statements made by Mr. Jones in which he blithely promised the public it would have tires in short order. They must have, for instance, the amazing statement, made Feb. 2, 1942, just after Pearl Harbor, in which the United Press reported:

"Secretary of Commerce Jones told the House Banking Committee today that he believed the United States will be getting all the rubber we need from the Dutch East Indies by the end of 1943, despite the present Japanese threat to that area."

NEW DOCUMENT FOR DEWEY

However, one important document in Mr. Jones' record may not be available to Mr. Dewey. In case he hasn't seen it, this columnist is delighted to publish it. It is a letter written by Ed Stettinius, now Under Secretary of State, then a member of the National Defense Council, in which he puts the responsibility for synthetic rubber delays squarely on Jesse Jones' complacent shoulders.

Stettinius had various conferences with Jones, advising that war was imminent and that we must begin building up a synthetic rubber industry. He had also written Jones several letters urging rubber production. Furthermore, Emil Schram, head of the RFC under Jones, had worked out a plan to finance Goodrich and Phillips Petroleum in setting up a 100,000-ton rubber factory.

This was in July, 1940, more than a year before Pearl Harbor, but Jones stepped in and blocked the Goodrich-Phillips deal. Schram, disgusted, resigned.

Finally, Stettinius, also disgusted with Jones' procrastination, wrote him a letter calculated to make any ordinary human being think twice before he delayed longer. Stettinius said he was washing his hands of the whole matter. The letter, hitherto unpublished, and dated Nov. 25, 1940, one whole year before Pearl Harbor, follows:

November 25, 1940
"The Honorable Jesse Jones
"Federal Loan Administrator
"Washington, D. C.
"Dear Mr. Jones:

"There has been some question raised as to the speed with which the arrangements for the production of synthetic rubber are progressing. This is only to be expected, because it may be a matter of vital importance in the defense effort. I want to take this opportunity, therefore, to make

Lack of Physical Fitness

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE REPORTS of the medical selective service boards on the physical condition of American youth and the findings of some of our universities to the effect that a large percentage of youths in the freshman class could not swim or chin themselves five times and did not have the endurance to do simple calisthenic exercises indicate the need for intensive and deliberate training of the bodies of our young generation.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

A program of daily exercise should be instituted certainly in High School period, and possibly in grade school. As much as I am opposed to compulsory military training, the findings of the boards have been so revelatory and so utterly surprising that I am receptive to the idea for at least the periods of the summer vacation in the last two high school years. As a rough measurement of criteria of physical fitness we may take two quite definite and measurable standards—posture and endurance. It was endurance which came out as so lacking in the tests in the University of Illinois students. That a young man of 18 could not swim 50 yards, that he could chin himself on a horizontal bar less than five times, that in a prone position on the floor he simply did not have enough endurance to raise his legs straight in the air 20 times—that this could be in the United States of America and not in one or two youths in the freshman class of a University, but in 40 per cent seems to me decidedly cause for alarm and correction. As things look now we are obligated to police the world for half a century and we cannot do it with weaklings.

Posture and Endurance
Both posture and endurance can be improved by planning. And if exercises are planned to that deliberate end the attainment of good posture and endurance will produce a well rounded physical specimen, not a sort of freak muscle man. We can afford to take a page from our enemy and imitate the old German turnverein. The Swedish Ling system is much the same.

The two functions of muscle which are capable of training in order to accomplish the objects we desire are tone and coordination. Tone is that function of muscle whereby it remains under sustained tension. It is the same thing as the tone of the string of a musical instrument. You cannot get a good tone out of a string that is not tense. Tension is necessary to maximal power of muscular contraction. It produces the maximal efficiency and economy of energy. It can be trained by exercises—which require sustained tension of the muscles.

It may be surprising, but it is no less true, that sustained tonicity does not produce fatigue, but on the contrary, the person who is always the most fatigued is the one who is sitting in the rocking chair all day and can hardly get up courage to make the attempt to get up and go down to the post office.

Muscular Tone

Tone is of importance in respect to adequate stabilization of the skeletal system. In accomplishing good posture some training is necessary in muscular coordination. It is necessary to have toned muscles if you are to have muscles which act with coordination.

"The maintenance of posture," says an eminent authority, "is an example of the nicety of adjustment between various parts of the body to fit the new position."

Good posture eliminates stresses and strains. The center of gravity of a human being is at the level of the second lumbar vertebra—roughly at the waist line. The line of gravity runs from about two inches in front of the ankle joints to the topmost part of the skull.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

DAN WAS sitting on the porch rocking when Russell came home. He had gotten away from Anne and her doctor as soon as he could. Dr. Raynor had been very kind, but it was like being talked to by someone out of another world. Once Dan had broken away he'd come to sit here on Russell's porch, and he seemed to breathe freer. He had come back to Talbot because he couldn't get Anne out of his mind. He had come back hoping desperately that there must be some way of showing Anne that he really loved her. Now he could laugh at that crazy idea. Anne wasn't of his world. She didn't even speak the same language. Now he had seen her with Dr. Raynor, who wanted to order champagne instead of sodas, he knew where he stood.

It was funny, but he accepted the famous doctor as he had learned to accept most of his reverses. Far from hating the genial, successful man, he liked him. It was easy to see how any girl would love him if he offered himself, and there was no doubt of his love for Anne. It was written all over his handsome face—and how handsome that was! Dan smiled to himself. Dr. Raynor was like Russell, only more so. That expressed the thing in simplest terms. Dr. Raynor was the exact opposite of himself. There was no question of a choice between them.

He felt a little sorry for Russell. That was in his mind as he watched his brother drive up and park his car in the garage at the side of the house. As there was no light Russell didn't see him until he came right up on the porch. Then he stopped and cried out, "Dan!"

Dan stood up. "I'm back or not, just as you wish."

Russell flung an arm about him. "You poor kid. Don't you know yet that I always want you? It isn't home unless you're here."

"Even when you lay me out as if a steam roller had gone over me?"

"I'm sorry for that. If you'd only not run away, I'd have told you."

"I know. I stuck out my chin and even asked for it."

Russell patted his shoulder. "It won't happen again. You can depend on that. How long have you been back home?"

"Just a few hours. I knew you'd be here."

"Why didn't you go into the house? You got in before. Don't tell me you really wondered if I wanted you."

They went into the house and Russell turned on lights. Going into the kitchen, he came back with two bottles of beer which he waved triumphantly.

"Here they are, left from—before. Come on, see if we can get you something to eat. I haven't been eating home, but there's still the canned goods department to work on. I bet you're hungry."

Dan smiled, his strange, wistful smile which had touched Anne. "I could eat," he acknowledged. "Tramps are always hungry, you know."

Russell gave him a quick glance. "You must promise me you'll never go hungry again."

"I try not to. But it happens."

Russell began opening cans recklessly. "I could eat, too. It seems years instead of hours since dinner. Laura and I were to see Mrs. Reynolds. She's in Weston hospital now and the famous Dr. Raynor has come to operate on her."

"I know Dr. Raynor."

Russell raised his head from the job of lifting a canned chicken onto a platter. For a moment he just stared, and Dan felt he could almost see the legal mind at work. Russell's voice was quite colorless as he said:

"How do you know Dr. Raynor?"

Dan's smile widened. "I had ice cream tonight with him and Anne at Johnson's."

Russell's laugh was quick, relieved. "Of course. How else could you know him?"

"You're right, Rus. I've been in New York, but we don't exactly move in the same social circle. I can't picture Dr. Raynor riding on a side-door Pullman."

"I don't mean that. Don't be sensitive or—this time I'll have to spank you by way of making you behave." His eyes glowed with affection as he said it. "Here, start carrying things in. Even if it's only a snack, we're going to do it in style. No bread, though. You'll have to pretend you're on a diet."

"Do I need to get any thinner?" Russell patted his shoulder. "This time I'll fatten you up. Let's make coffee. If it keeps us awake, so much the better. I want to talk to you all night. I want to hear where you've been, what you've done, and—why you ran away."

Dan laughed as he held the platter up. "I haven't been anywhere. I haven't done anything. I've just wandered around. Lord, it was hot."

Russell caught his arm. "Let's start in on beer and have coffee when it's ready. You eat while I do most of the talking. Goodness, it seems ages since we've eaten together. Let me see, Anne stayed at the inn until—yes, it was Fourth of July. That day Mrs. Reynolds fell out of her chair and it seemed like a stroke. Laura got the scare of her life, because she couldn't get her mother up or get a doctor. Everyone was down on the Strand watching the races. Luckily, Laura got Anne, who ran right back and worked wonders. Dr. Banning says she saved Mrs. Reynolds by knowing just what to do. It seemed a miracle at the time, but now we know Anne is a nurse. She's assisting Dr. Raynor in operating tomorrow."

Today's Horoscope

You are scrupulously honest, if today is your birthday, faithful to duty, sincere and say just what you mean. You are studious and intellectual, well informed, a clear, keen thinker and lucid talker. Do not marry young; you will judge people differently and by different standards as you grow older. Your next year will be somewhat trying and difficult. Be on the lookout for business frauds, deception and misplaced documents. Be guarded in speech and writings. Some happiness will be realized. Born today a child will develop artistic and literary talents; be fond of travel and successful as a lecturer or teacher.

Hints on Etiquette

According to one authority a man wears his wedding ring on his little finger. In many double ring ceremonies taking place now, however, the men are wearing the ring on the same finger as the woman—the third on the left hand.

Horoscope for Sunday

Sincerity, frankness and assurance are the chief characteristics of the person who has a birthday today. You are thorough in your work and usually succeed. You are quiet and reserved, do not like social life except in your own circle. With your friends you are affable and entertaining. Benefits through novel or uncommon businesses are promised you in the next year, but do not indulge in doubtful speculation. A threat exists of disagreements with partner and/or elders. The child born today will crave excitement and may suffer through the lure of the senses, especially if he or she is born early in the morning. The late afternoon or evening is more propitious.

WITH TWO SUITS BID ONE

WHEN YOU have two suits worth bidding over the opponents' call, it is nearly always well to bid one of them—whichever will make it most readily possible to show the other later. Doubling or passing may mean that you get shut out of a chance to show both of them, and consequently result in your landing in the wrong contract. If you disclose one to your partner on the first chance, you can often safely reveal the other later, as you put him in a position to choose the better-fitting one.

How Rapidly Can Auto Industry Reconvert?

November's Election Is Vital to Henry Wallace

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Some WPB officials feel that the automobile industry is not laying it on the line in its predictions that reconversion from war to peace may require from six to nine months.

There is a suspicion among these officials that the auto makers are purposely making such gloomy forecasts in order to pressure WPB into relaxing certain controls and enable the industry to get going now on reconversion.

WPB experts point out that in 1942 the auto industry cried for gradual shifting to war production, asserting that abrupt termination of car making would mean long unemployment and idleness of facilities while the industry was being toolled for war.

However, once the cut-off was announced the industry converted to war production with a breath-taking burst of speed and its facilities were in operation again before the unemployment problem became serious.

WPB officials believe the same thing will happen on reconversion. One car maker is expected to be on the market with new cars in three months.

Plants, Bulbs To

About 50 members attended the splendid meeting of the Pickaway County Garden club Friday at the home of Mrs. C. P. Heiskell, North Court street. For the occasion, the home was beautifully decorated with colorful fall flowers, grown and taken to the session by Garden club members.

During the business hour in charge of Mrs. E. E. Porter, new president, it was planned to take shrubbery, bulbs and flowers for Fall planting to the Lockbourne Army Air Base. Plants and bulbs are to be taken by Friday to Mrs. Emmett Barnhart or Mrs. F. K. Blair, who will see that they are taken to the air base.

Meeting Life's Problems

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Oct. 9 is Matthew 4:1-11; 6:24-34; Luke 4:16-30, the Golden Text being Matthew 4:4 "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.")

THE FIRST part of our lesson tells of Jesus' temptation in the wilderness whence He had gone to fast and meditate. Jesus had had nothing to eat for forty days and forty nights, and was hungry. Satan took this time to approach Him.

The tempter said to Him, "If Thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." Jesus' answer was immediate, "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Then the evil one took him up into the holy city and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, telling him to prove He was the son of God by casting himself down. The Lord would send His angels to keep him from being dashed to pieces. But Jesus said, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." God had not ordered Him to prove Himself in that way. The Lord's will was His law.

Then the devil took Jesus to "an exceeding high mountain" where He could see "all the kingdoms of the world," and suggested that if He would only worship him—Satan himself—He would be given the rule over all. Jesus told him to "get hence, Satan; for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." The tempter left, and angels came and ministered unto Jesus. You will notice that the strength of Jesus for victory over Satan was His knowledge of obedience to, and use of the Word of God.

Jesus' Cure for Worry
In these troubled times, when anxiety for the present and the future of the world and of our own hearts, is uppermost in all hearts, the next lesson Jesus teaches us is especially timely. Are we distressed for fear we will not have enough food in the coming time?

"Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?"

You cannot make yourself one inch taller by fretting about your height, so why worry about it? "And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: And yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

Man was made to work and to be thrifty. He should exercise these gifts that God gave him, but why should he worry about these things? Why not trust that the God who provides for the beast and vegetable worlds would show man how to overcome his difficulties and win his way?

"Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you," Jesus advised.

Jesus Visits His Home
Jesus made a visit to the home town, Nazareth, where He was brought up, and where His mother, His brothers and sisters lived. As was His custom, He visited the synagogue on the Sabbath. As was the habit in the synagogue, news of His works having probably traveled there, He was invited, as a prominent person, to read from the scripture.

Jesus chose a passage from Isaiah, "The spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He hath anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor; He hath sent Me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

He then closed the book, gave it to the minister, and sat down, and these people who had known Him from babyhood looked at Him with wonder, asking one another, "Is this not Joseph's son?" Then Jesus said, "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears."

These home town folk of the Lord's were filled with anger when they heard these words, and they hustled Him out of the synagogue and took Him to the brow of the hill on which their city was built. They would have thrown Him down it to His death, but His time was not yet come. There was work to be done, so Jesus slipped quietly through the crowd and went His way. Truly, as He said to them, "No prophet is accepted in his own country."

Greater cooperation and closer unity with other Lutheran groups, and post-war development will be the major issues confronting delegates to the eighth regular biennial convention of the American Lutheran church, to be held at Zion Lutheran church, Sandusky, October 9-14. The Rev. George L. Troutman of the Trinity Lutheran church will attend as a delegate from the Columbus Conference.

Approximately 250 delegates and advisors from all parts of the United States and Canada are expected to attend the six-day session. Attendance will be limited and the program curtailed to urgent business in compliance with war-time expediency.

Of primary importance will be the convention's action on issues involving cooperation with other Lutheran bodies. The proposed constitution of the National Lutheran Council, a cooperative association of eight Lutheran groups, including the American Lutheran church, will be presented to the convention for ratification. If approved, it will make possible more extensive united Lutheran action in mission and welfare activities, and a triennial national convention of all Lutheran groups in America. Action is also expected on the question of establishing pulpits and altar fellowship with other Lutheran groups on a selective basis.

Jakucki And Brecheen Hill Choices For Fourth Game Today

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 7—Up until a late hour Friday, the St. Louis Browns were just a lot of guys who'd never amounted to anything and, suddenly finding they had a certain importance they'd had no previous reason to expect or suspect, were naturally all agog and feverish about the thing. In fact, they were completely carried away by the novelty of it, and the gusto that went with a new-found life that must have seemed strangely beautiful and fine.

But all illusion on that point ended Friday when they won the third game of 1944's all-St. Louis World Series from the favored Cardinals, 6 to 2, with some grimly determined and very rugged baseball.

And doubtless this disillusioning process will continue this afternoon in the playing of the fourth game in which Sig Jakucki, ex-paperhanger, ex-soldier at the age of 16 and now just a kind of an old repaint job, and Harry Brecheen, Cardinal left-hander, will do the pitching.

Yes, there is still that strange set of characters sitting around on the Browns bench with Manager Luke Sewell. But now we and the Cardinals alike know them for what they really are—a succession of pitching "desperados" who make runs very hard to come by.

And a team which seemingly it did that in the third inning Friday for four runs and somehow the Cards never quite the same team again. Until then, they'd felt all along they were going to win the series, even when they were getting beaten with their bellweather and 22-game winner, Morten Cooper. In the opening game, But now, the Birds were no longer sure. In fact just a little skittish.

In confirmation of same, there can be cited this fitful and disorderly record of the third game:

The Cards permitted five straight hits to be made without removing their pitcher, Ted Wilks. They fanned 10 times, mostly at moments that were drastic in effect. They had a passed ball for one run, and a wild pitch for another. One of them, Ray Sanders, took a called third strike with two on and the count 3 and 2. And they wound up making two wrong moves on one play, while a man scored all the way from first base.

That was in the Brown's seventh, after the Cards had made it kind of close at 4-2 with an extra run in the first half of the inning.

As a consequence of all this, plus the very practical fact that the Browns now lead by two victories to one, the American League is favored in the betting odds this morning for the first time. Before the series, the Cardinals were 1-2. Two nights ago, after Blk Donnelly had put on his one-man show as a relief pitcher, they were as low as 9-20.

The funny thing about this was that the price on the Cardinals didn't recede in proportion to their chances in the series or their performance of yesterday. The average "book" was quoting the Browns at 5-7, but wouldn't give any more than that. In some cases it was a little less (at 6-5) against the Cardinals, who've at least convinced the price-makers that they're a better ball club than they've proved to date.

Apparently, in fact, the percentage-players are expecting Harry Brecheen to beat that Jakucki guy today though there was nothing in the latter's last performance (when the pennant was won on the last day of the season) to merit his view. Brecheen, who, barring McQuinn, and Gene Moore, can be faced with all-right hand hitting lineup, won 16 and lost 5 during the regular National League season.

Jakucki's record in the American League is 13 and 9. But one of those 13 was a 1-0 thriller the Browns had to win, five days out from the finish; and another was the pay-off game on the final Sunday. In other words, this strange bloke can be, and quite often is, tougher than a night in a cell block.

Yes, and frankly the Cards are beginning to wonder about all of it, as time goes on. They might, incidentally, begin to wonder about themselves, too — especially after the harrowing details of yesterday.

No need of course, to kibitz a manager as to whether he should or should not lift a pitcher when everybody's knocking his brains out. However, the Browns' two runs in the seventh inning really made the other side look pretty bilious. Gutteridge, for instance, doubled to right, took third on an out and scored on a passed ball which hit Walker Cooper's glove and caromed to the stands. Then Stephens walked and took third on McQuinn's third hit, a double to right.

As a matter of fact, that's what Stephens should have done—taken third. But Musial wasted a priceless split-second groping for the ball on the rebound from the wall and then threw to the wrong man. The wrong man was Sanders in short right field, who next threw slightly in the wrong direction pulling Cooper off the plate and away from the play, while Stephens scored.

That did it. We would say, in fact, that by this time the three-time champion Cardinals were beginning to dimly suspect for the first time that they might not win this all-St. Louis series of 1944.

TULANE'S GREEN WAVE TO TEST NOTRE DAME
SOUTH BEND, Ind., Oct. 7—The Green Wave of Tulane rolled into South Bend today for the first real test of Notre Dame's 1944 football strength. The game, the first in history between the two schools, drew some 35,000 fans to the Notre Dame stadium.

For Tulane, it was the season's opener, but the team is made up largely of veterans capable of beginning to answer the question: how good is Notre Dame this year; can it compare with the Irish national champions last year?

The South Benders, composed largely of youngsters swamped Pittsburgh 58 to 0 last week in their first game, but then, even in Pittsburgh, they don't call any clue to Irish power.

Friday the 13th holds no terrors for Phil Baker, quizmaster of "Take It Or Leave It." While most other showfolks, notoriously superstitions, go into hiding for the day, Baker will lead with his chin by appearing as a guest of Amos 'n' Andy on their broadcast Friday, Oct. 13. The comedy team plans to rib the quizmaster but Phil, well rested after a vacation from his own program last Sunday while Ralph Edwards substituted, is already preparing his fast answers.

One-Mill Agricultural Levy Put Up To Vote of People

FAIRGROUND AND FIELD HOUSE WOULD GET CASH

Levy Would Yield $49,000 For One Year—Issue Gets Ballot Okeh

Pickaway contains will vote "yes" or "no" November 7 on a one-mill agricultural levy to help finance a field house and fair-ground project.

The levy, requested by the Pickaway County Agricultural Society, was certified to the board of elections Friday by the county commissioners and will be placed on the ballot this fall. Claude Kraft, clerk of the board of elections said Saturday.

Several weeks ago directors of the Agricultural Society voted to request the commissioners to place the issue on the ballot, but final action on the levy was delayed until Friday.

When the levy was turned over to the election board, members stated that it should have been filed by Sept. 15, but on advice of the prosecuting attorney it was accepted. Prosecutor George Gerhardt ruled that the issue had been legally filed, stating that the election board could accept the issue up to 30 days before the date of the election.

The levy will yield approximately $49,000 in the one year it is to be in effect. Agricultural Society said the money is to be used primarily to finance the erection of a field house. Cost of the field house, to be used to house exhibits at junior fairs, for county basketball tournaments and other community and county events, is estimated at $75,000. The remainder of the cost is to be financed from other sources.

The county commissioners are permitted by law to appropriate up to $10,000 a year for buildings and $2,000 for maintenance.

Agricultural Society directors stated they wanted the voters to ballot on the issue this fall so that, if it is approved, money will be available to start work on the project as soon after the war ends as possible.

'ONLY DOING 40'
TRENTON, N. J.—A driver involved in an accident when a tire blew out declared he was traveling only 40 miles an hour. His car left the road, sped 121 feet, climbed on a shoulder, veered 50 feet across a lawn, struck two trees 41 feet apart and then skidded 39 feet into a house. The motorist sustained minor head injuries. "Good thing you weren't going 60 miles an hour," a judge wisecracked, fining the driver $15 and costs.

a matter of record this Division's responsibility in the program. "You will recall the unsatisfactory situation which resulted when conversations were carried on between representatives of the industry and both the RFC and the Industrial Materials Division of the Defense Commission. At your request, therefore, and with the approval of the commission, I turned the whole matter over to you for final determination. With my letter to you of October 23 were enclosed a copy of my report to the Defense Commission, and the report of this Division's chemical group outlining the synthetic rubber situation. The same material was sent to the President on that date, together with the covering memorandum making it clear that the whole synthetic rubber situation had been turned over to you.

"You are, of course, thoroughly familiar with these facts. However, I felt it desirable that it be perfectly clear that the Industrial Materials Division of the Defense Commission is not now considering itself responsible for developments in this matter.

"Sincerely yours,
"E. R. Stettinius, Jr."

Jesse Jones has an incurable propensity for denying everything unfavorable about him, but Governor Dewey can be confident that the above letter is one document not even Jones can deny.

The rest of the rubber record is too tragic and too well known to every automobile driver to need much research by Mr. Dewey's experts. However, on Feb. 12, 1941, three months after Stettinius wrote the letter telling Jesse "the whole synthetic rubber situation has been turned over to you," the Washington Merry-Go-Round reported:

"Stettinius is almost tearing his hair over the ponderous patience of Jesse Jones. . . . Meanwhile, the chance of the Japanese taking the Dutch East Indies becomes greater."

Soon after Pearl Harbor Day, Jones was caught with synthetic rubber production of only 7,865 tons. The country's consumption that year had been 750,000 tons. Three days after Pearl Harbor Jones was still sublimely complacent. He told the senate military affairs committee on Dec. 10: "We could get along pretty well for two to two and a half years without importing any more rubber. We have 125,000 tons afloat now."

On Jan. 13, 1942, Jones told the New York Times that "the expanded program for making synthetic rubber would virtually end the American rubber shortage in about 18 months"—or about June, 1943. June, 1944, has now come and gone, and the public would still like to have that long-promised rubber.

DRY LITERATURE POSTAGE-FREE

The Prohibition movement has developed a new wrinkle in using the Congressional frank. Ardent dries are now employing it to circulate prohibition literature at government expense.

The other day a letter bearing the frank of Congressman Joseph R. Bryson of South Carolina turned up at Palos Verdes estates, not far from Los Angeles. It contained a speech delivered by the Honorable Mr. Bryson entitled, "The Greatest Menace in the Present Emergency."

But close examination of the speech shows that it was delivered not by him but by C. S. Longacre on Dec. 11, 1943, in Detroit, Mich., and is a ringing appeal to dry up the country. Thus a Michigan speech under a South Carolina congressman's frank to someone in California—with the taxpayer footing the bill.

We're the Party-Line Brothers
Please use us sharingly!

There are more telephone teams like us on the job now than ever before. And, folks, we like the families we work for.

They know that sharing a telephone line is one way to send vital materials off to the fighting fronts, instead of holding them here at home to build new telephone equipment.

So they're pleasant and considerate of each other. None of them monopolizes the line. They try to share it equally.

That makes it lots easier for us to give them prompt, efficient, satisfactory telephone service—to be on hand when they really need us.
